

Home

Photo gallery

Garden

Map

...more

Another entry of:
Trips and such

A visit to Hershey Gardens

On a nice sunny day in July 2014, we take a trip to Hershey Gardens. The roses are in full bloom offering a wonderful opportunity to take pictures. Our good friend Dennis Rose (Yes! that is his name) has brought along some of his professional cameras and handed one to me to take whatever catches my eye ... roses and more roses! We see evergreens and gardens structures... Hardwoods, perennial and annual flower gardens. It is such a glorious colorful scene.

What to See

There is a Butterfly House, a Children's Garden, and whimsical sculptures. Because of the hot sun, we search out shady areas, drinking water, and taking pictures. What a nice afternoon... no stress, just walking, talking a bit, and cameras clicking.

Using a Digital Camera

Dennis has the digital camera set to take 5 shots in quick succession... what a wonderful thing in the Butterfly House. I say "well they just won't sit still" and Dennis says, "That camera is fast. When I give you a CD, you will see much more than you think!" Right, he is—talk about point and shoot!

